

Hungry for Justice?

Join us to earn your Master of Science degree in Food Systems and Society at Oregon Health & Science University

Human societies decide how we grow, process, distribute and consume our food. Fair and sustainable food systems are central to survival. Currently they are neither. We need to do better. Urgently.

Our collaborative on-line courses address social justice questions and concepts essential for doing better. In every way and every place that you participate in the food system, your work will be enhanced by your Food Systems and Society degree.

Visit our website to learn more about:

- ✓ Our curriculum and its unique focus on equity/justice in food systems.
- ✓ Guided Capstone research projects on a social-justice topic of your choice.
- ✓ Full and part-time options, with supportive peers from all academic backgrounds.
- ✓ The work of students and alumni in food policy, research, health care, community development, food enterprises, and education.
- ✓ How you can apply.

bit.ly/FSSprogram

